TRAVEL IN COMFORT AND STYLE

TRULY UNIQUE LODGING

IZAAK WALTON INN
Essex, MT

The Izaak Walton Inn is a historic train-themed inn in Essex, Montana, originally built by the Great Northern Railway in 1939 for lodging railway workers. In addition to railway lodging, the hotel was also originally envisioned to become an official southern gateway to Glacier National Park, although that plan didn't come to fruition. The charming Tudor Revival inn was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1985. Interestingly, in addition to the rooms within the inn itself, some refurbished cabooses are also offered and available on most dates upon request at a higher rate.
